

We have been informed that the FCC may be considering a proposal that would allow telemarketers to begin calling our home again. We had our number added to the list of no call numbers in the state of IN in the past year and I would hate to go back to receiving unwanted calls again. I often work nights and need to sleep during the day. Because the school may need to get in touch with me regarding one of our children I do not like to turn the phone off or unplug it. However I would often get woken up because someone was trying to give me another credit card. Sometimes this call was from a bank where I already have 2 cards that I rarely use. Another common call is from a phone company trying to get me to switch long distance phone service when I spend less than $15 per YEAR on long distance service. My wife often eats at home for lunch and it was not uncommon to have 2 or 3 phone calls from telemarketers during the hour she is home. I can only remember a few times that we have accepted the offers over the years and those were times when we had been looking and had pretty much decided to go with the program they were offering. Sure I did not have to call them, but I would rather dial the phone once when I need to rather than answer it unnecessarily 10 or more times per week. I do not like to be rude but I also don't feel I should have to tell someone "NO" 3 times before I can hang up politely. Please don't mess with the law in Indiana.
